

The Solanco School District is a member of the Delaware Valley Consortium for Excellence & Equity (DVCEE), which is a consortium of schools dedicated to eliminating achievement gaps defined by race/ethnicity, economics, gender, or (dis)ability.

DVCEE member-schools share a common commitment to “ensure that all students have equitable opportunities to access high-level, meaningful, and engaging learning experiences, while actively eliminating institutional barriers in district and school policy and practice that limit or deny this access.”

The DVCEE is a collaborative of numerous school districts located in the Philadelphia-area region in addition to schools in southern New Jersey and northern Delaware.

Membership in the DVCEE provide the Solanco School District with the following:

- Evidence-based professional learning from nationally-recognized scholars and practitioners.
- Innovative strategies for addressing district-school organizational and instructional issues, and student underachievement.
- Leadership learning opportunities for middle and high school students of color.
- Enhanced recruitment of administrators and teachers of color.
- Support in the development and implementation of equity-informed district strategic plans.
- Sharing of leadership and learning experiences.
- Regular, active collaboration with other consortium districts to examine policies and share promising practices.
